Grocery & Bakery | Flour

Prices continue to trend higher and out front pricing is firm as worldwide harvests are looking to be a little lighter than originally forecasted. Durum prices continue to rise indicating pasta prices will continue to rise as we enter 2022 production as a result of the North American drought as North America is the largest exporter of durum wheat in the world.

Grocery & Bakery | Sugar

Pricing remains steady to higher with a lack of product available for trade in the spot market as a majority of the harvest is already booked into 2022. Spot pricing is much higher than contract pricing right now as a result of heavy forward bookings and delayed harvest in both the Midwest and southern states due to weather challenges.
